

NEW YORK DELEGATION SPLITS OVER SUPPORT OF BUTLER

First Picture of the Republican Convention At Its Session at Chicago Coliseum Yesterday

me a letter and said he heard I claimed to be only eighty-six. 'All I have to say,' he wrote, 'that you are either a miracle or a damned liar.'"

Mr. Dewey said the country needed experienced statesmanship to deal with the problems growing out of the war, declaring the Republican Party had handled it "with ability" after the Civil War, and has proved its quality to do so. He took successive flags at President Wilson's trip to Europe to the great amusement of the delegates.

Other presidents, he said, had dealt with foreign nations but had selected the best brains and men in the country to go and do it.

"When Mr. Wilson went to Europe and the politicians and diplomats said to him, 'What do you want?' he replied, 'I want a League of Nations, a heaven on earth, on which I shall be the recording angel.' The convention got a good laugh out of that."

"The League of Nations is here and there is no man who can add one word to the description which was given by our Chairman, Mr. Lodge. As I travel about man after man comes to me and says, 'I always have been a Democrat, but Mr. Wilson has taken away every principle of the Democratic party and I want you to nominate a good man and win.'"

There was applause when Dewey said he would tell a story told him by James G. Blaine.

He said there was one Isaiah Smith of Bangor, Me., who went to a revival meeting and moved clear up to the pulpit during the fervor of the meeting, but when the Deacon asked him to be converted, he said: "Deacon, I am convinced, and I am under conviction, but I am in a woman's scrape and can't join the church now."

FIRST WOMAN ADDRESSES A NATIONAL CONVENTION.

There were calls for various speakers after Mr. Dewey had retired and amid a whirlwind of cheering, Mr. Lodge introduced Mrs. Markara Hill McCarter of Kansas, who got a round of applause.

"The women of America," said she, "are organized and trained and ready for the duties of citizenship. We stand by the party that never has failed in its loyalty to the good old Stars and Stripes. The women of America must follow that banner and I pledge you here that the womanhood of America will not be found wanting in upholding Republican ideals. At the ballot box we stand ready to fight with you that in all the coming years that our Nation with efficient leaders of Republicanism shall share and the Star Spangled Banner in triumph shall wave o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

EACH CANDIDATE PROFESSES CONFIDENCE IN RESULT.

As usual, each candidate who has delegates pledged to him is more confident today after the convention has begun to function than he has been at any time since the opening of the campaign for the nomination. To hear them out it is they are all winners. They are like the old-time prize fighter who on the eve of an engagement was wont to say to inquiring members of the press: "I never was in better shape in my life."

Nevertheless, the nine delegates who are holding sessions for The Evening World for the purpose of figuring out what the Republican Party should, and possibly will, do on a basis of common sense continue to believe that this convention will bring out considerably, and that the longer it strings out the more apparent will become the elimination of Wood and Lowden, and the conviction in the minds of the leaders that Hiram Johnson will, eventually, be able to make good his promise—made at some time not specified by those who quote it—that he will name the nominee if he can't be the nominee himself.

Therefore the nine delegates, after their experience in the convention yesterday, cling to their original proposition, namely:

First—For President, Philander C. Knox; for Vice President, Hiram Johnson.

Second—In the event of Hiram Johnson being unable to dominate and the pale dark horses being unable to get together, Herbert Hoover for President.

Furthermore—The nine delegates agreed that Charles E. Hughes may come into the convention through a ventilator or something before the final adjournment.

This Hiram Johnson campaign is a wonder. It might have been staged by John Ringling or William A. Brady. The managers have built all their own scenery and props, and the book and lyrics have been written by persons who take their ideas from William Randolph Hearst. Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago is providing the lighting effects.

ALLEGED BETTING ODDS MAKE JOHNSON FAVORITE.

One of the manipulators behind the scenes is Mr. James O'Leary, a bookmaker by profession, who has handled some pretty big betting propositions in his time. Through the influence of Mr. O'Leary, who is very close to Mayor Thompson, the United States has been flooded with alleged betting odds prevailing in the betting marts of Chicago. These quotations invariably state that Johnson is even money in the betting.

A man possessing a bank roll of $3 in real money and wanting to bet it on the nomination of Johnson might get a speculative investment down if he consented to put up his three bones against a dollar. In other words, Johnson is one to three in the actual betting, and there is very little money being placed at that figure.

This is a Johnson town. The Senator from California has surrounded himself at any time with what is left of the human machine that made Col. Roosevelt a Chicago fief. But all he has is what he can show on the floor of the convention, and the nine delegates are not about to take the money off his hands. They are not about to take the money off his hands. They are not about to take the money off his hands.

The nine delegates are of the opinion that Wood, having paid more than a $100,000 for his chance here in Chicago—even if the million was not his own money—and Lowden, having paid $114,000 out of his own pocket for an opportunity to make a debut in national politics, are going to try to get their money's worth. They aren't going to lay down on the first ballot. And the more they fight each other the stronger they make Hiram's opportunity to say: "Well, if you won't have me you'll have to take the man I select."

Chicago is full of rumors to-day that Philander C. Knox is in town. Industrial news bounds have been unable to locate him if he is here. Chicago is a big town and more conspicuous persons than Philander C. Knox have hidden in Chicago.

MOST CHAUTAUQUA-LIKE CONVENTION EVER HELD.

Prohibition has changed national conventions from the status of highballs to the grade of nut sundae. There is very much of a soda fountain aspect to the prevalent gathering, but there is more talk among delegates and visitors about liquor than about candidates. This is the most Chautauqua like national convention ever held. Imagination balks at contemplation of what the next one will be. And in the convention after that delegates with bass voices will probably have to equip themselves with an apparatus similar to the mule the professional cornet player stuffs into the end of his horn when he essays to put over some sob stuff.

In the session of the nine common-sense delegates last night the delegate representing the New England group asked his colleagues what they thought of yesterday's convention. The delegates representing the group which includes the City of New York replied:

"When Lodge got through I felt like calling up Eddie Columbus."

The New York delegation, 88 strong, the biggest delegation in the convention and the delegation that might be able to swing the final score if it could be voted as a unit, is marching along like an army with ten bands and each band playing a different tune. I have said that the New York delegation, if it could vote right now, would vote for six different candidates. As a matter of fact, the strength of New York delegation is at this writing, spread seven ways over the convention layout. Mr. Lou Payn is for Coolidge.

NEW YORK DELEGATION SPLIT ON BUTLER.

The New York delegation would like very much to drop Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler too sweet. He will not get the united delegation on the first ballot, at that, despite instructions. Possibly twenty delegates will refuse to vote for him under circumstances. A caucus of the delegation to be held to-night may change the aspect as it concerns Dr. Butler. It all depends on Dr. Butler.

The big Wood camp on the ground floor of the Congress Hotel, where they have all the doors with all the names over them, was pretty close to a live political headquarters to-day. Delegates coming in and picking their support until the cows come home have bucked up the Wood managers.

One of said managers said last night that the only way they can beat Wood is to favorite him. "What do you mean by favorite him?" inquired an innocent bystander.

"I mean that they will try to put up so many favorite sons with the object of scattering the vote as long as possible, that we won't be able to hold our delegates to the finish," was the reply.

KELLOGG'S NAME MAY BE PRESENTED TO CONVENTION.

Evidence that this manager knows what he is talking about is furnished by the information coming from reliable sources that Frank H. Kellogg, the well known trust buster of Minnesota, is to be placed in nomination some time along in the course of the performance.

Plainly the object of putting Mr. Kellogg in nomination is to match some votes for Kellogg, and such votes would, obviously, come from Wood.

Chicago is full of Congressmen and active Congressmen, but they aren't listening much to Kellogg.

TENANTS PUT OUT AFTER COMPLAINTS

Harlem Families Didn't Object to Rent Boost, But to Living Conditions.

Five families were evicted yesterday, seven more were slated for dispossession to-day and the remainder of the thirty-two families at No. 212 East 109th Street have been ordered to move out within two weeks as the result of an order issued by Municipal Justice Hoffman.

According to Harry Brody, Chairman of the Tenants' Committee, they do not object to a 25 per cent. increase. All they have asked is that the tenement be made habitable. At the invitation of tenants, an Evening World reporter to-day went through the house—walls and ceilings cracked and broken, no hot water, no cold water on the two upper floors.

Mr. Brody said the leasee of the building, Isadore Schwartz of No. 833 Caldwell Avenue, told Justice Hoffman that he would be willing to take a 25 per cent. increase, but the court referred the tenants to the Board of Health with their complaints. Inspectors were sent up, Brody said, but no action was taken.

Acting on eviction warrants obtained by Henry Moskowitz, owner of Nos. 624 and 618 East 139th Street, Bronx, City Marshal Thomas Gerraghty this morning evicted eight families from the two houses. Moskowitz claims that these have been making most of the trouble with his tenants which has brought him into court several times recently.

FATHER MARTIN'S WILL.

Requests to Many Institutions From $25,000 Estate.

The Rev. Patrick J. Martin of Mount Hope, who died in St. Agnes's Hospital, White Plains, on May 3 last, left an estate of $25,000 in personal property.

His will, just filed, makes a number of public bequests, including $3,000 to the Sisters of the Third Order of St. Francis at Mount Hope. Dennis E. Manning is named as executor.

LOOT 4 ADJACENT BRONX STORES

Police Withhold News of $14,000 Burglaries Committed at the Same Time.

Related news of four burglaries in the Bronx came out to-day despite the efforts of the police to keep them quiet. Maria Polak's waist shop at No. 922 Westchester Avenue was the first to suffer. He reported the loss of $1,000 worth of silk waltzes between Saturday, May 22, and Tuesday, June 1.

Just across the street the Dupont Corset Shop, No. 1002, about the same time was robbed of $4,000 worth of silk underwear and kid gloves. Around the corner, at No. 1008 Southern Boulevard, the Chain Shirt Shop reported at the same time the robbery of $5,000 worth of silk pajamas, ties and other goods. Sam Weinberg, No. 510 Claremont Parkway, is the fourth in the list. He lost $4,000 worth of silk gloves, stockings and underwear.

So far the police have made no arrests. The robberies are believed to have been the work of one well organized gang.

WANT HER LICENSE REVOKED

The Board of Education at Mount Vernon, N. Y., yesterday adopted a resolution directing W. H. Holmes, Superintendent of Schools, to begin proceedings before the Commissioner of Education of the State of New York to revoke the teaching license of Miss Gertrude K. Morris, a former teacher at public school No. 5.

The latter part of April Miss Morris handed in her resignation, to take effect May 1, on the ground that her salary was not sufficient to maintain her. The board of education refused to accept it because she had not given thirty days' notice. Miss Morris accepted a teaching position in New York at a higher salary. It was said.

WOMAN IS HELD FOR CHILD'S DEATH

Mrs. Marino Says She Did Not Throw Girl in Front of Auto—Husband Aids Her.

Mrs. Marie Marino, the young Polish-American who is alleged to have thrown her five-year-old daughter Evangelina under an automobile last Friday while in a heated argument about the child's custody with her husband, James Marino, Italian barber, was held without bail to-day for the Grand Jury. She was arraigned in New Jersey Avenue Court, Brooklyn. The charge was charged from homicide to that of manslaughter in the first degree.

Mrs. Marino appeared worn and weary as she leaned against the rail. Sigmund J. Trapani, counsel for Mrs. Marino, moved that the charge be dismissed on the ground it was an accident. The Magistrate denied the motion, but expressed sympathy for the woman.

The woman burst into tears, crying that she didn't intend to kill her baby. The baby was buried yesterday from its father's home, No. 236 Osborne Street. The mother was not permitted to leave jail to attend.

Detective Lieut. Donohue told of the alleged argument between Mrs. Marino and her husband. Marino corroborated the detective's testimony.

When he heard Mrs. Marino say she was hungry, the Magistrate asked Marino why he did not do something for his wife. The mother was quiet and calm, handed her a $10 bill, which she accepted thankfully. Later, in her cell, Mrs. Marino said she still loved her husband, and would go back to live with him, if he would do right.

Upset in Delaware Tennis Tourney.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 2.—The first big upset in the Delaware State tennis championship tournament took place to-day when Mrs. Marion Harvey of the Philadelphia Country Club, was eliminated in the second round of singles by Miss David Mills of Orange, N. J. 7-5, 7-5.

SWANN ON STAND AT HENRY'S TRIAL UPHOLDS SMITH

Tells of Assistant's Handling of County's Gambling Cases Since 1917.

District Attorney Edward Swann appeared as a witness for the prosecution of Inspector of Police Dominick Henry this afternoon in his trial for perjury.

He is charged Henry lied to the Extraordinary Grand Jury about James E. Smith, assistant to Swann, saying Smith made a proposal to him to share graft.

Judge Swann, questioned by William Rand Jr., Deputy Attorney General for New York State, said Smith had been in charge of gambling cases in the District Attorney's office since 1917.

Q. Did you ever say to him about Whitman: "You made him Governor; why don't you make me Governor?" A. No.

Smith followed Swann on the stand. The first witness was James J. Hines, Tammany leader of the 11th Assembly District. He denied that he introduced Henry to Smith at 1034 Street, and said no such meeting had taken place on Feb. 9, 1918, or any other time.

Q. Do you ever have a talk with Henry about Smith? A. Yes. After I came back from abroad I met Henry in March and he asked me what I knew about Smith. I said Smith was a tough nut and was trying to do up one of my best friends, Louis Hartag.

Q. What else did you tell him? A. I told him Smith had tried to intimidate Hartag in the District Attorney's office.

Q. Did he say any thing else? A. We went over the Hartag case.

Hartag is complainant in a suit for millions of dollars against Charles F. Murphy on account of profits lost in a deal regarding the sale of ginocine to the British Government.

W. Bourke Cockran, counsel for Henry, asked Hines if he knew Marie Jordan of No. 242 West 70th Street.

who, he said, was to be a mine of information regarding the vice situation.

"No," said Hines. "This inspector has me mixed up. You are wrong. I don't know what you are talking about."

Frederick W. Hopper, President of the Professional Chauffeurs' Club of America, mentioned by Henry in his Grand Jury testimony as having been introduced by him to Smith, said he never met Smith in his life.

Dennis J. Quinn, a brother-in-law of Assistant District Attorney Smith, mentioned by Henry in his Grand Jury testimony as a "go between," denied that he had ever seen Henry until he met him at the door of the Grand Jury room in the present proceedings.

Train No. 34, a Michigan Central special with ten cars carrying express matter, disregarded signals and went at high speed into Train No. 28, a New York Central passenger train, bound from Buffalo to New York, according to the story of C. Robinson, brakeman of No. 28. He said he saw a red lantern in rain and finally threw it into the cab as the express dashed by.

The Pullman at the rear of the train had twelve passengers and was demolished. Its passengers were bound for New York. Next to it was a Pullman with twenty-two passengers, destined for Boston. The other cars of the passenger train were day coaches and baggage and mail cars.

The address of Lillian H. Tillingham, one of the Federal Judge Julius Stick this morning revealed that the Tillingham family were to occupy an apartment at that address some time this week. They were expected yesterday. It is believed they were en route to their new home in New York City when the wreck occurred.

George W. Schvamberger, one of the injured, lives at No. 288 Ryerson Street, Brooklyn, and has a wife and three children. He travels for the United States Electro-Galvanizing Company.

HUGHES JURY DISAGREES.

No Verdict in Case of Accused City Detective.

Lying on a couch in his rooms in the Hotel Ansonia, Federal Judge Julius Stick this morning discharged the jury in the case of Detective Thomas W. Hughes, of the Malden Lane squad of the Police Department, when the foreman announced that an agreement was impossible. The case was transferred to Judge Mack's quarters yesterday when injuries to his foot prevented his going downtown.

Detective Hughes was charged with attempting to bribe Harold Dobbs, a revenue officer, by the payment of $1,000 for which Dobbs was to procure certain papers in a liquor case pending in the Federal court.
